

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—There was another fine house at the Academy last evening—the attraction being a debutante, Miss Harris, in the character of Zecia. There was no agent currier of foundation, but all the effect produced by her was the sheer force of her merits. She is very young; of a very little frame. Her voice is a high soprano, of very light quality and intrinsically agile—so that she gets over the rapid details of vocalization. It was a creditable début, and showed that she has worked well, and been discreetly taught. How far time and womanly development may confer the requisite fullness and roundness of tone necessary for the ripest qualities of lyrical singing, we shall not venture to surmise, but so far as a first appearance is concerned, subject to all the drawbacks of a debutante's inexperience and stage fright, it was a most promising beginning.

This evening, Saturday, Faust will be performed.
